

Name change won't attract students

I HAVE just read the excellent article by Maria Ochoa ("University missing the point with proposed name change," Dec. 1). Thank you, Ms. Ochoa, for reminding us of the failings of the California State University, Hayward, administration and pointing out that a name change is unlikely to attract donors or students to CSUH. I suggest that it is time for Norma Rees to retire, as well as any members of the university administration who find the elimination of Hayward from CSUH's name a beneficial change.
