National League of American Pen Women

November 18, 2016 through January 27, 2017

The National League of American Pen Women began in 1897 in Washington, D.C. when because of their gender three well-known professionals were denied access to the Press Club. The disgruntled ladies formed their own comparable organization of women with achievements in letters, art and music composition. Today, over 1,600 members across the nation meet for support and inspiration.
